Working With Voices

Hearing voices is one of the most common experiences that people diagnosed with a psychotic illness have and research has shown that many people continue to hear voices even after prolonged use of medication. This has meant that many voice hearers do not get relief from their experiences. The consequence of this is that many people live lives that are low in quality & high in distress. Many professionals are left frustrated when medication does not deliver the desired results.

Learning Outcomes:

All participants of training will have:

- An understanding of hearing voices.
- Been introduced to developing coping strategies.
- To working within belief systems.
- Been introduced to voice profiling.
- Developed confidence & awareness in working with voices.
- Developed a toolkit for working with client's voices.
- The confidence to use the voices workbook.
- Understanding of how a hearing voices group is run

Presenters:

Ron Coleman is a Mental Health Trainer and Consultant specialising in psychosis prevention and resolution. He has designed training packages to enable voice hearers to gain ascendancy over the negative aspects of the voice hearing experience. His own route to recovery, after spending 13 years in & out of the psychiatric system, has given him many insights into the many difficult issues facing today's mental health services. Ron has published several books including 'Politics of the Madhouse', co-authored 'Working with Voices' & 'Working to Recovery' and wrote 'Recovery an Alien Concept?' Ron is now back in his homeland of Scotland after 20 years of self imposed exile!

Paul Baker is a community development and group worker. Paul has worked in the health care and education sectors for the last 30 years. He had the responsibility for developing innovative mental health care services in the community. These include services run by the people who use them, self-advocacy services, supported housing services, social firms and enterprises as well as the development of forums for people to enable them to have a direct input in the development and running of services. For fifteen years Paul was the chairperson of a large housing association for homeless people in Manchester. Paul was one of the founding members of the Hearing Voices Network in England and was the coordinator of INTERVOICE, the influential coordinating body for the international hearing voices movement.
